OPINION AND COMMENT

The President's Report

A careful reading of "The President's Report" (the annual report of President Chase to the Trustees and of the various officers of the University) leads to at least three definite impressions: (1) Within the past twelve months the University has experienced an unusual growth numerically and physically; (2) There has been a conscious and effective adjustment of internal organization to the requirements resulting from this expansion; and (3) There are many evidences that the whole institution in all of its several parts is alive to the educational demands which the State of North Carolina is making upon the University and is definitely at work on a constructive program to meet those demands.

Standing Room Only

The alumni require no recital of the physical growth of the plant and the increase of numbers. The story of new dormitories in construction, of faculty houses, of railroad connections, of projected recitation buildings, etc., has been told over and over again. Nor of the numerical growth. It is history that 2,165 students were enrolled from June 15 to December 31 for college credit and that a total of 2,771 students, Summer School and regular, were on the campus within the dates mentioned. Similarly the Law School, the School of Pharmacy, the School of Medicine, the School of Commerce, the Graduate School, and the School of Education have had the largest enrollments in their history, and all departments are strained to the breaking point for lack of class rooms and laboratory facilities.

The Gear Has Been Better Adjusted

The story of the adjustment of the machine to the increased load, however, has not been told, and unfortunately lack of space makes it impossible to do more than note the fact in these columns. But advancement in this fundamental particular, save in one or two instances, is just as spectacular as that in the other matters mentioned. After two years of experimentation the position of dean of students has been standardized and defined. The dean has become the morale officer of the campus, rather than the administrator of discipline. The spirit of the campus, student relations and government, the unifying program of Chapel—these are matters which come under his care, while the registrar and deans of particular schools look after absences and administer the standards of scholarship.

Furthermore, through their respective "administrative boards" each school has addressed itself to the study of matters of administration and educational policy with a tremendous gain in effectiveness and definiteness of purpose. Similarly the Business Manager's office, the Extension Division, the Library, and the Y. M. C. A., through their boards and personnel, have studied their programs in relation to those of other parts of the University with the total result that there is better functioning and more adequate correlation between the various parts of the institution than ever before. In this respect, certainly, the year has been of most welcomed progress.

Tying In With the State

Accompanying this internal readjustment, there has been a like closer coordination with State agencies. This is taken as a matter of course in the cases of the Extension Division and the School of Education. But through the Extension Division, or directly, more and more departments are making vital contact with State life. The School of Public Welfare furnishes the Commission of Public Welfare a consulting officer and psychiatrist. The department of Civil Engineering and the State Highway Commission have collaborated in the establishment of a fellowship in road engineering and a plan for carrying on special investigation in road materials. The News Letter has made a connection with the North Carolina Press Association in the undertaking to know North Carolina better. The bond between the School of Education and the Orange County schools has been greatly strengthened. The School of Commerce has established an industrial service and other connections whether new or old have received fresh consideration throughout the whole University.

An Enriched Offering Sought

The recommendations presented by the schools and officers also furnish convincing evidence of the forward look. The School of Medicine discusses the need of four years of medical training in North Carolina. The dean of students desires more flexible loan funds for self-help students, while the dean of the Graduate School calls for similar loan funds for graduate students and the adviser to women asks that like provision be made for women. New courses are recommended in the fields of comparative literature, architecture, forestry, extension teaching, education; and the demand for new buildings and enlargements for Geology, Chemistry, Pharmacy, the Library, the Woman's Association, is more insistent than ever before. Particularly noteworthy are the recommendations of the Librarian that from $350,000 to $500,000 be put into a new library building, preferably somewhere near the heart of the campus and that increased funds be provided for the book collection; of the deans of the Graduate School and School of Education that scholarly journals or studies be provided in the fields of the economic and social sciences and education; and of various officers and departments that fellowships such as the recent Kenan foundation in philosophy be provided to insure the presence of a large number of mature, specially equipped students on the campus. And all through the various reports there is a steady cumulative insistence for a greatly enriched offering on the part of the University to the student body.

Further Medical Instruction Considered

While all the reports justify extended notice, space admits of quotations here from only two—the Medical School and the School of Education. Dean Manning expresses this following opinion concerning a four-year medical school:

The time has now arrived when we should give serious consideration to the matter of establishing a four-year school and offering the complete medical course. The efforts to raise the standards of medical education by the American Medical Association and other national organizations have reduced the number of medical schools from one hundred and sixty-two to ninety six and the number of graduates from fifty-five hundred to three thousand. The surviving schools have found it necessary to limit the enrollment in all classes to such a degree that it is becoming increasingly difficult not only to transfer students who have completed the first two years of the medical course to desirable clinical schools, but it is equally difficult for students desiring to begin the study of medicine to gain admission to the schools. There are a very large number of students in the pre-medical courses in our colleges, and many of them will be refused admission.

The problem does not involve merely the continued existence of the two-year medical school, but the larger problem of an adequate supply of physicians. There are only two states, South Carolina and North Dakota, with so few physicians to the population as North Carolina. The ratio for the country as a whole is given as one to seven hundred and twenty. In North Carolina the ratio is one to eleven hundred. There are many communities in North Carolina without medical service, and there is much medical work that is not being done. The increase in the number of physicians is not keeping pace with the growing in population. There is not only an inadequate supply of physicians in the State, but under present conditions the outlook is very insecure. We have depended entirely upon schools located in the large cities for a very essential part of the training of our physicians, and it is becoming evident that we cannot depend on them very much longer. We must plan for the training of our own doctors.

The fact that there is no very large city in the State is not an insuperable difficulty. It is entirely possible to conduct a thoroughly creditable clinical school in a town of less than twenty thousand people, as is being done at Ann Arbor by the University of Michigan, and as will be done at Madison by the University of Wisconsin. Given a hospital with two hundred beds, properly equipped and supported and manned by a qualified teaching staff, it is entirely possible to conduct an acceptable clinical school in any one of several towns in North Carolina. People in need of medical advice will go wherever it may be had. The cost of maintaining a clinical school, if conducted on modern and approved lines, will be no greater in North Carolina than in any other state or city. The cost, however, offers the most serious difficulty in the solution of the problem.

“How to Teach” Courses Needed

Reference has previously been made to the desirability of closer coöperation between the various departments and the School of Education. In discussing this point, Acting-Dean Walker argues convincingly that many of the departments should not only thoroughly ground their students in the content of courses, as they have previously done, but that in addition, in order to equip more adequately young men and women who are preparing to teach, they should offer at least one course designed especially for teachers of their particular subject. Continuing he says:

Such courses ought to be given in English, mathematics, history, general science, physics, chemistry, biology, geography, economics, Latin, French, German, Spanish and music. Teachers of these special subjects should be required to take at least one such professional course in their major field, and might well be allowed to take such professional courses in two departments.

To carry professional credit, these courses should be based upon specified prerequisites to be determined by the department offering such courses. The character of any such professional course should be determined by the School of Education and the department in which the course is to be given. In no case should such course be given unless the interest of the department concerned can be enlisted in it, for there must of necessity be full understanding, complete harmony, and the closest possible coöperation between the School of Education and the departments concerned.

From the Point of View of Publicity

Two other impressions of possibly no particular moment were: (1) That some of the reports were admirably written from the point of view of lending themselves to constructive publicity. We have in mind particularly such reports as those of the Director of Extension and the Adviser of Women, to mention two, which only require a leading paragraph to shape them to the uses of the press; and (2) That in the case of other reports which in the very nature of things could not lend themselves to easy treatment of this sort, special effort should be made by the correspondents of the press to get the essential facts of publicity to the public. The achievements of the University during the year have been so far-reaching, the service of the Governor, the Legislature, and of alumni and citizens generally in making possible these achievements has been so notable, that the story should be widely and enthusiastically told.

Look Who's Here: Carolina Inn!

On another page THE REVIEW carries a story setting forth in a general way the proposition which Mr. John Sprunt Hill made to the trustees at their January meeting for the erection of a hotel or inn in Chapel Hill. The proposal was easily the feature of the trustee meeting, and it has been hailed far and wide as a way out of the intolerable situation with which the University is at present confronted.

Mr. Hill and the committee appointed to consider the proposition want the opinion of the alumni. Letters setting forth alumni opinion should be sent direct to members of the committee or open letters in THE REVIEW will be most welcome. Now that the matter is actually taking form, every one who has a constructive suggestion should make it in order that the building may yield the greatest possible good.

One Suggestion

As a starter, and without full consideration of the subject, THE REVIEW wishes to make one suggestion, or rather, to emphasize a suggestion contained in Mr. Hill's program. It is that provision be made in dining room and special rooms for the holding of state and national conventions. THE REVIEW understands that the best purposes of the University will be served when its usual, daily needs are met, and that a building cannot be projected for unusual purposes. But it wishes to make the point here that reasonable space for small conferences or conventions is the most important space that can be provided for it, and if proper use is made of such space by the University there need be no financial loss to the promoters. Reference to the annual report of the Michigan Union shows that one hundred and twenty-five such meetings were held at the University of Michigan from May 1, 1920, to April 30, 1921, and it is easy to conceive of bringing two or three such groups a month to the campus to the very great profit of the University and the State. We do not want any one to be taxed with the upkeep of a white elephant, but reasonable space devoted to this purpose will prove tremendously valuable.

Co-eds and Pharmacists, Attention!

The attention of all alumni, and particularly of the women and students of pharmacy who have attended the University, is directed to articles appearing elsewhere in this number announcing celebrations at the coming commencement of the 25th anniversary of the admission of women students and the establishment of the School of Pharmacy. Committees representing both groups are preparing attractive programs for the occasion and big attendances are expected.

Where Rivalry Leads

For the consideration of all North Carolinians who have followed with varied emotions the "amateur" athletic contests, both baseball and football, in which North Carolina towns have participated, THE REVIEW reprints below a press dispatch under the date line Chicago, January 28:

The bitter rivalry between two country towns which became so acute that approximately $100,000 was bet on a football game, was the real cause of the athletic scandal which resulted in disqualification last night of nine University of Illinois athletes and which threatens to reach into Notre Dame University.

A group of citizens of Carlinville, Ill., it was learned, decided last fall to "clean out" financially the rival town of Taylorsville, Ill., by obtaining 10 college stars to play on their football team, and with victory apparently assured, to bet the limit on the annual contest between the two elevens.

But Taylorsville learned of the plan, obtained nine college stars for its own team and not only defeated Carlinville, but won close to $50,000 by covering every Carlinville bet made, thus heating the rival town at its own game.

Ten Notre Dame players were on the Carlinville line up according to statements by citizens of that town, while the nine Illinois men disqualified last night played on the Taylorsville eleven.

Subsequent dispatches clear two of the Notre Dame players. But the fact remains that two towns of about 6,000 population each sent 10,000 persons with $100,000 in their jeans to the game with the results noted above.

A Way to Help Municipalities

THE REVIEW has just read with unusual interest the 130-page Bulletin (Extension Division Vol. 1, No. 7) containing the Proceedings of the First Regional Conference of Town and County Administration held at the University last summer under the joint auspices of the University, the North Carolina Municipal Association, and the National Municipal League, and edited by Dr. H. W. Odum, Director of the School of Public Welfare.

From start to finish, the publication addresses itself to the careful consideration of problems confronting North Carolina towns and cities, and in that way brings together in printed form one of the most notable contributions made in North Carolina to this subject.

Study of the publication tends to strengthen an opinion long held by THE REVIEW, namely, that one of the richest fields which the Division of Extension is yet to cover adequately is that of municipal reference. The department of Rural Social Science has acquainted North Carolina with many facts concerning the social and economic aspects of rural life, but a similar service has not been rendered the cities. The present bulletin is a first step in this direction, a step which, to our way of thinking, should immediately be followed with the establishment of a fully equipped bureau of municipal reference, with personnel and library facilities adequate to the task of helping North Carolina towns chart their courses along better lines than in the past.

An Important Undertaking

THE REVIEW wishes to congratulate the Greensboro Daily News and Miss Hattie Berry, Secretary of the North Carolina Good Roads Association, on the joint program projected by them on March first of editing a page or pages in the News dealing with the industries and resources of North Carolina. Here, certainly, is an undertaking, that, like the road program to which Miss Berry contributed such practical leadership, is tremendously worthwhile, and, conducted as the News and Miss Berry will undoubtedly conduct it, will lead to untold good to North Carolina.

THE REVIEW cannot tender other services than its own to the support of this program; but from its knowledge of the University's desire to further every movement looking to the study and development of the State, it knows that the enterprise will receive the heartiest sort of backing by the entire University.

The Tar Baby Again

The following letter from President Chase to the high school authorities of North Carolina, dated February 1, states the case as to The Tar Baby. Alumni should read it carefully:

There has come into my hands a copy of a letter written the high schools of the State by The Tar Baby, Incorporated, concerning the publication of the High School Number of the magazine, and referring to certain prizes for the best work done.

Inasmuch as the letter sent out bears the line "The University of North Carolina," and therefore it might be thought that the University of North Carolina is in some way concerned, I desire to make the following statement, which I ask you to communicate to your school:

1. The Tar Baby is not a University of North Carolina publication. It is a private business enterprise. Mr. Abernethy has not even been a student here for some time, and whatever students are associated with the publication are employed as private individuals by the company, not as delegated representatives of the student body. The Tar Baby is not in any way supported, controlled, or authorized by either the student body or the faculty, or any group thereof. Some months ago a statement to that effect was made by us through the press, and the columns of THE ALUMNI REVIEW. The authorized student publications of the University of North Carolina are the Tar Heel, Carolina Magazine, and Yackety Yack.

2. The Tar Baby was instructed by me on November fifth in writing to remove from its letterheads the line "University of North Carolina," and legal steps are now being taken to insure compliance with those instructions.

3. The propositions made the high schools of the State were made without the knowledge or sanction of the University authorities, and the University can in no way assume responsibility for their fulfillment.

4. The character of certain of the material which has appeared from time to time in The Tar Baby is such as the University sincerely deplores, and with which it is thoroughly unwilling to have its name, or the name of the student body associated. The University has, as stated above, no connection with and no control over the publication, and hopes that you will give proper publicity in your school to this fact.

Dr. Charles Baskerville, who died in New York in January, was one of that great number of North Carolinians who have been drawn away, because of their conspicuous ability, to wider fields and to greater rewards in fame and fortune than the State has been able to offer them. In claiming him we say it with the full knowledge that Dr. Baskerville was not a native of our soil. He was born in Mississippi in 1870. Yet he may be truly called a North Carolinian, for he took both his bachelor's and doctor's degrees at the University, he taught here for twelve years, he married Miss Mary Boylan Snow, of Raleigh, and, last of all, when he died Raleigh was chosen as his last resting place.

After graduating from the University of Virginia and pursuing special work at Vanderbilt, he came to the University of North Carolina in 1891 and won his Ph. D. under Dr. Venable in 1894. From instructor he was gradually promoted until he became professor of chemistry and head of the chemistry department. In 1904 he was elected head of the chemistry department at the College of the City of New York and he held that post until his death.

After he was settled in New York, Dr. Baskerville's scientific interest took an industrial turn. He established the Baskerville Products Company, which supplied anaesthetics to the American Army in the World War. His contributions to chemical science were considerable. Among them were investigations in the chemistry of anaesthetics, the application of radium in medicine, processes for refining oils, and the hydrogenation of oils.

Speaking of the investigations carried on by Dr. Baskerville, the New York Times, a few days after his death, made the following significant comment:

The service, at once scientific and humanitarian, of Dr. Baskerville, is illustrative of what the science of chemistry is undertaking for the alleviation of human suffering. Dr. Baskerville's special researches had to do with the causes and prevention of occupational diseases and with the purifying of ether as an anaesthetic. These are, however, but suggestive of the innumerable researches in which his brother chemists of every land in this new age of their science are seeking not only to heighten industrial productivity, but to promote and conserve the health and strength of human bodies.

Dr. Baskerville, not only by his own researches, but also and especially by developing and equipping what was perhaps the best series of chemical laboratories in the United States and by organizing a department which has given tuition to hundreds of young men for service in this science, made his lasting contribution, though his studies and researches and teaching here are over. It will be remembered, however, that but a few weeks before his death, after years of intimate study of the atom, he said that "there is something that cannot be explained on a purely materialistic hypothesis." So the quest goes on.

Not only to University men but to a host of Southerners interested in intercollegiate sport, Dr. Baskerville is remembered for his intimate connection with athletics during the entire time that he was a student and a teacher here. He was on the famous football team, captained by Dr. Michael Hoe, which defeated Virginia 26 to 0 in 1892. For several years he practically controlled the athletic policy of the University. Often—and this was known to but few at the time—he dipped into his own resources to meet deficits suffered by the athletic association in bad seasons. A thorough sportsman himself he was always a staunch defender of amateur athletic standards.

High School Debate March 24

Before another issue of THE REVIEW the annual contest of the High School Debating Union in some 250 North Carolina communities will be held. As in previous years, the contest will call forth a great deal of interest in the local communities, and will afford the alumni an opportunity, in many instances, of assisting in carrying out the program. THE REVIEW calls attention to the date when the triangular debates will be held throughout the State—March 24—in order that all alumni may take such part in the event as the occasion seems to demand.

NEW CAROLINA LAWYERS

Twenty-seven Carolina alumni received license to practical law in the examinations conducted by the State Supreme Court in January. The big majority of these went direct from the University Law School. The list of those admitted to the bar is given herewith:

F. E. Alley, Jr., Waynesville; C. G. Ashby, Raleigh; S. L. Arrington, Rocky Mount; W. H. Bobbitt, Charlotte; D. C. Boney, Kinston; R. E. L. Brown, Chadbourne; V. C. Daniels, Boydton, Va.; T. A. Eure, Eure; W. R. Francis, Waynesville; R. H. Frazier, Greensboro; G. V. P. Fesperman, Spencer; F. L. Grier, Statesville; E. W. G. Huffman, Greensboro; C. B. Holding, Raleigh; P. D. Herring, Clinton; L. H. Kernodle, Graham; R. M. Moody, Murphy; H. M. McAuley, Huntersville; W. C. Maupin, Jr., Salisbury; W. B. Penny, Hendersonville; H. C. Ripple, Winston-Salem; E. E. Rives, Greensboro; J. G. Tucker, Plymouth; B. H. Thomas, Rocky Mount; Carl Weigand, Chapel Hill; J. R. Young, Dunn; J. W. Hunnicutt, Asheville.

The musical recital given under the auspices of the department of Music in Gerrard Hall, Sunday afternoon, February 5th, was conducted by students of the University. In this respect it is noteworthy as marking the beginning of such participation by members of the student body. One of the most notable features of the recital was the playing of the University stringed quartet which has recently been formed and which adds to the artistic life of the University.

CAROLINA INN

As announced in the February REVIEW, Mr. John Sprunt Hill, '89, at the recent meeting of the trustees, offered to give the "Graves" property and $10,000 toward the erection of a first-class College Inn at the University. The proposal made to the trustees was taken under advisement and a committee, consisting of Josephus Daniels, John Sprunt Hill, George Stephens, Clem Wright, and Lindsay Warren was appointed to investigate and report at the June meeting of the trustees. In speaking to THE REVIEW of the purpose which he had in mind in making the offer, Mr. Hill outlined the following plan:

To Be Located on "Graves" Property

The "Graves" property fronts 200 feet on Cameron Avenue at the west gate of the campus of the University and has a depth of about 500 feet on the west side of the new Pittsboro road now under construction by the State Highway Commission. Across the rear of the Graves property runs the new railroad track, and plans are being drawn for the construction of a local passenger and freight depot. At present, the Graves residence, containing ten rooms, stands in the center of the lot, and it is proposed to move this residence somewhat to the rear, remodel the building so as to make it a first-class student's boarding house capable of feeding, comfortably, one hundred students and rooming from fifteen to twenty people. It is then proposed to erect a first-class College Inn of fire-proof construction, consisting of about fifty rooms on second, third and fourth floors, with ample room on the ground floor for a large and spacious alumni room, a ladies' parlor, large and comfortable dining room, lobby, and wide verandas, the pantry and kitchen also to be of fire-proof construction, to be used in connection with the Graves Annex so as to concentrate all cooking and service at one point.

Social Center for Alumni and Faculty

It is not proposed to erect a large hotel in the ordinary commercial sense, or to cater particularly to the general public, but to provide for the special wants and comforts of the University alumni, friends of the University and their families, friends of the students of the University, and University visitors. It is also proposed to provide quarters for the use of the faculty of the University so that alumni, visitors, and members of the faculty may meet in a social way.

Financial Side of Proposal

The financial side of the proposal involves an expenditure of $100,000 of which Mr. Hill has promised $10,000. To provide the remaining $90,000 a campaign will be organized among the alumni. It has been suggested that a club, to be called the "University Club" be organized and that 200 life memberships at $200 each be sought. Also that annual membership in the club be provided for at $10 per year, with an initiation fee of $20, the latter to be applied to the building fund. Mr. Hill believes that 500 alumni will join the club on this basis, leaving $40,000 to be secured in other ways.

Under University Management

Further plans as outlined by Mr. Hill include the utilization of the Inn as headquarters of the alumni secretary and as the meeting place for such conventions as the University may wish to hold from time to time of State or national organizations. It will be under University management and will be run primarily and always for the benefit of the University, the alumni, and friends and visitors of the University. It is not intended that it shall in any way conflict with the Graham Memorial building, which will serve as the student activities building, but on the contrary that it shall supplement it.

THE NEW S. A. E. HOUSE

Three years ago several of the fraternity houses at the northwest corner of the campus were destroyed by fire. As the University needed the land where the houses had stood for future expansion, the fraternities involved looked elsewhere for a suitable place to build. After various plans had been discussed, Messrs. A. H. Patterson, representing the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, and Bruce Webb, representing the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, obtained options on a piece of property on Columbia Street, opposite the University Infirmary. Professor Patterson then proposed to the building committee that the University take over these options and develop a fraternity court, where the homes of the various fraternities could be built in congenial surroundings. This the committee agreed to do, and after obtaining the sanction of the board of trustees the property was purchased and surveyed, and lots were assigned to the various fraternities who had turned over their former lots to the University. The University will grade the property, and will develop it along lines similar to the way the Arboretum has been developed.

The first of the new houses has just been completed by the T. C. Thompson Co. for the S. A. E. fraternity. It is of colonial design, of brick with slate roof, and the idea has been to construct it in fireproof manner. On the first floor is a large living room, 22x34 feet, with beamed ceiling and large fireplace, as well as a study and a bedroom, while under the stairs is a coatroom and lavatory. On the second floor are four bedrooms and a large sleeping porch, besides a bathroom with showers, and a plentiful supply of closets. A large meeting room and another bedroom are on the third floor. The house is heated with steam, and has all modern conveniences. The floors of the principal rooms are of hard wood, and the two front rooms and the hall can be thrown together for dancing. Other fraternities contemplate building in the near future.

In the report of the U. S. National Museum for 1921 (p. 53) mention is made of the fact that the material on which O. W. Hyman, A.B., A.M., based a recent paper on the metamorphosis of crustaceans, has been permanently deposited in that museum. The material consists of young stages in development, collected and reared by Prof. Hyman at Beaufort, N. C.

PHARMACISTS TO HOLD CELEBRATION

At the commencement this year the School of Pharmacy is planning to celebrate in a fitting manner the twenty-fifth anniversary of its existence. Definite arrangements for the celebration have not been completed as yet but these will shortly be perfected by the Anniversary Committee composed of I. W. Rose, '06, chairman, Rocky Mount; J. G. Beard, '09, secretary, and E. V. Howell, Chapel Hill; Polk C. Gray, '99, Statesville; F. G. Jacobs, '00, Elizabeth City; S. E. Welfare, '06, Winston-Salem; K. E. Bennett, '12, Bryson City; R. A. McDuffie, '15, Greensboro; N. W. Lynch, '05, Charlotte; and C. T. Durham, '18, Chapel Hill. An official schedule of this celebration will appear in the next issue of THE ALUMNI REVIEW. In connection with this anniversary it may be of interest to alumni to learn that during the twenty-five years of the School's existence it has matriculated 756 different students. The total registration has been 1041, many students being counted more than once as they returned for further study. This number, 1041, is distributed as follows: juniors 695, seniors 229, special students 103, graduates 14.

There were graduated from the School up to and including the commencement of 1921 a total of 113 students, 104 of whom received the degree of Ph.G., 5 of P.D., and 4 the degree of Ph.C.

Of the 756 students who have been registered for pharmacy in the University 213 are proprietors of drug stores, 200 are prescriptionists, 30 are practicing physicians, 5 are traveling drug salesmen, 4 are pharmaceutical chemists, 2 are teachers of pharmacy, 1 is in the Naval Hospital Corps, 72 are still students in the University, 201 are either out of the drug business, have moved to other states, or are of unknown profession. Twenty-eight of the alumni group have died.

As a result of a recently passed law in North Carolina which makes graduation from a reputable college a prerequisite to registration as a pharmacist, and by reason of the loyal support that druggists generally are now giving the School, it is reasonable to prophesy an era of splendid promise for the School. As its alumni increase in numbers and more and more make their influence felt, and as the University adds to the material equipment and enlarges the teaching machinery of the School, there is developing from what was once a little known department, an educational enterprise that is reflecting much credit upon the entire institution. The School of Pharmacy is now twenty-five years old, an infant only when compared with many departments of the University, but its quarter century of service has given it a secure place in the esteem of the drug profession and it looks forward confidently to a future of fruitful endeavor.

J. G. BEARD, '09, Secretary.

Under a new program of work arranged by the School of Education, Dr. E. W. Knight, and the Extension Division, the University is giving instruction in Education through class and correspondence study to a large number of the teachers of Orange County. Classes are held in Hillsboro and papers are sent to members of the faculty who give instruction through correspondence.

Every county in the State except Graham, Mitchell, and Vance are represented in the group. The counties that send ten or more are: Alamance 26, Beaufort 15, Bertie 10, Buncombe 56, Cabarrus 24, Caldwell 15, Carteret 19, Catawba 15, Chatham 15, Chowan 10, Cleveland 20, Craven 23, Cumberland 22, Davidson 16, Duplin 14, Durham 24, Edgecombe 25, Forsyth 47, Gaston 27, Granville 18, Guilford 83, Halifax 22, Harnett 17, Haywood 10, Hoke 11, Iredell 27, Johnston 23, Lee 13, Lenoir 21, Mecklenburg 81, Montgomery 12, Nash 27, New Hanover 24, Northampton 14, Onslow 16, Orange 76, Pasquotank 11, Pitt 25, Randolph 17, Richmond 19, Robeson 23, Rockingham 19, Rowan 47, Surry 17, Union 16, Vance 20, Wake 47, Wayne 34, Wilkes 10, and Wilson 22. Guilford leads with 83, Mecklenburg follows with 81, Orange with 76, Buncombe with 56, Forsyth, Rowan, and Wake with 47 each.

The freshman class previously attended schools as follows: North Carolina public 359; North Carolina private 71; outside public 22; outside private 46; colleges and universities 16.

The president of the student-body joined the ranks of registration officials this last September and, assisted by his fellow councilmen, instructed entering freshmen in groups of twenty on the nature of the honor system and their part in it. The effect of such a measure in terms of men saved from disgrace of first offense and of the elevation of the general level of citizenship challenge the imagination.

A noteworthy change in student University relationship has followed upon the abolition of the damage fee, a thing that recognized no man as guiltless, a bet that every student would do $2.00 worth of damage in a year. Its abolition has produced a new level of student responsibility and a new record for minimum damage.

Students who wish to major in Highway or Sanitary Engineering will have an excellent opportunity to get this training through contact with the Highway Commission and with the Sanitary Department of the State Board of Health.

The enrollment in the School of Commerce for the first three years has been as follows: 1919-150; 1920-246; 1921-358. Through the Extension Division the members of the staff are initiating an industrial service for the business enterprises of the State, consisting of lectures, reading lists, bulletins on special problems in business, advice on specific questions submitted for consideration, and publicity of the industrial opportunities in the State.

The Graduate School enrollment for the year is 163. Fourteen states are represented in the number and thirty-three colleges. Twenty-four teaching fellowships of $500 each are available for graduate students. The school wants a graduate dormitory.

The Law School has had an enrollment of 168 since June. It requires a three-year course for a degree and six years for the A.B. and LL.B. It is a member of the Association of American Law Schools.

The enrollment of the School of Medicine is 83. All matriculates have had two years of college work. More than fifty applicants were refused admission in October on account of lack of room.

Beginning with 1922, pharmacy students must be graduates of a pharmacy school before they can receive state license. This calls for the addition of a third year to the pharmacy course and will greatly increase the need of a new pharmacy building.

The School of Public Welfare has been admitted to membership in the American Association of Training Schools for Professional Social Work.

On October 31 the Library contained 101,502 volumes and was receiving regularly 930 magazines, journals, newspapers, and proceedings of learned societies. Books added during the year numbered 5,857.

The University Laundry, built at a cost of $40,000, began operation in October and serves the entire student body. It has installed a dry cleaning and pressing plant and is rendering splendid, economical service.

Net maintenance receipts for the University, including the state appropriation for the year, were $621,408.99.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF WOMEN AT U. N. C.

According to the plans of the North Carolina University Woman's Association, a general reunion of all the women students who have attended the University since 1897 is to be held at the approaching commencement in celebration of the 25th anniversary of the admission of women as students in the University.

Letters to the 189 enrolled in regular session since 1897 have recently been sent, and Misses Louise Venable, Mary Cobb, Nellie Roberson, Ernestine Kennette, Elizabeth Lay, Adeline Denham, Catherine Boyd, Lina Pruden, Mrs. Huffman, together with Mrs. M. H. Stacy, Adviser to Women, as a central committee on arrangements, are actively perfecting plans for the celebration. The purpose of the celebration is to bring the women who have studied here into closer touch with one another and to interest them in the present day problems of the University.

In view of the celebration, and of the special interest which many of the alumni have manifested in the admission of women to the University, the following excerpts from Mrs. Stacy's report are presented, as they set forth many of the interesting facts concerning the status of women at the University:

The enrollment of women students last year reached, at its highest point, 63. The registration for the first quarter of the present year, is as follows: Graduate Students 10, Seniors 11, Juniors 13, Sophomores 5, Freshmen 7, Pharmacy 3, School of Public Welfare 6, School of Medicine 1, Special 1. While the enrollment shows six fewer women students than the total number of last year, it exceeds the registration of the first quarter of the year 1920-1921 by ten.

Women Exhibit Fine Spirit

The attitude of the women students continues very wholesome. Conscious of their obligations to the University as well as to themselves, they show keen interest in their work, and make every effort to keep their social life in sane proportion. Such spirit, as one would expect, is rewarded by excellent scholarship. Records show a general average of 2.83.

The North Carolina University Woman's Association is still the one means of expression and effective work for the group. An honor committee, which corresponds to the Student Council with the boys, has been elected. The president of the Association is now a member, ex officio, of the Campus Cabinet. This recognition of women students in discussion of campus problems, it seems, is the wise and logical step, since these problems are fast becoming questions for both boys and girls. In no better way, can be taught the fact that both men and women are needed for the solution of great human problems.

Self-help Bureau Established

Another new feature of the Association is the recently established self-help bureau. Eighteen girls of our number are here at their own expense. Twelve of the remaining ones are either doing remunerative work or have stated that they would like work as a means of supplementing their limited funds. So the bureau is now mailing the faculty and some of the citizens a card stating just the nature of the work that the girls do and the way to get in touch with them.

No progress has been made toward a gymnasium or any athletic provision for the women. They pay the regular athletic fee required of all students, and get no return save tickets to the games. They need very much a gymnasium and tennis courts; they should have physical education along with the mental.

New Fields Open to Women

Adapting oneself to adverse conditions is good discipline, no doubt; but it seems to those who are constantly confronted with the social problems and physical discomforts brought about by these adverse conditions that the time has come for the University to forget the old policy of mere toleration of women students, and to provide, in a whole-hearted way, for the new responsibility which has come through an eager desire on the part of North Carolina women to attain the best their State offers in way of scholarship and professional training. The University has made no effort to increase the number of women students; yet a member of the School of Education reports that there are teachers and supervisors all over this State only waiting for a chance to come to the University for their higher degrees. The School of Public Welfare, too, offers a new and rich field of service. Two scholarships have already been awarded this school by the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs. Instead of this meagre provision for forty-five women students, the University should stand ready and amply provided for one hundred and fifty.

All of these details have been mentioned to show the true conditions. Is the University going to be ready to meet the forthcoming demands? Can one expect the broad mental culture with present inadequate provision for physical and social welfare of students? We are far from our goal—an environment conducive to the cultivation of interests that will become the resources of a well rounded life. A Woman's Building with a well equipped gymnasium is not only a great need, but an absolute essential to constructive work. This building should be a real home, emphasizing the best uses of true society—an expression of all that is best in us. Then will the University send out that efficient woman for whom the home and the State have need.

Greater Unity Secured

The present living arrangement, unsatisfactory as it may be, is better than ever before. The Archer House, with the Roberson House as an annex, is the center of life for the students. The dining hall and sitting room in the Archer House are used by the girls of both houses. The two buildings can accommodate about forty students. All of the women students, except those who live in town and six others who are boarding with friends, live in the dormitory. Under this arrangement, it is possible for them to know one another in a more personal way, and to have presented to them conveniently whatever suggestions and announcements that are called for from time to time. Consequently they are developing a real spirit of unity which never before has been possible.

At the suggestion of the adviser, the women students have effected a very fine spirited house organization. At stated times, the house president (a girl elected by the entire group) calls a meeting, and in an informal way they discuss matters pertaining to their welfare. They have made for their own comfort and protection a few house regulations.

Better Living Conditions Secured

The University is very fortunate in having secured the services of Mrs. Adelaide P. Russell of Augusta, Ga., as house mother and dietitian. She resides in the Archer House; Miss Farmer, the public health nurse of Chapel Hill, has a room in the Roberson House, and acts as chaperon for the students there. Mrs. Russell has general supervision of both houses. She is a lady of culture and refinement; a mother herself, she is keenly interested in girls and their activities. Firm in her convictions of right and wrong, but always sympathetic, Mrs. Russell is proving a genuine friend to the girls.

Although provision has thus been made for a greater unity of effort and more satisfactory University supervision, the arrangement is yet a mere make-shift—expensive to both University and students and totally lacking in equipment for social and physical development. Several applicants withdrew their applications to enter this year when they found the expense of mere living. The cost of rooms, some of which are very uncomfortable, is as much as and even more than is paid in the cities of the State. The one small sitting room for the group is furnished with five chairs and a table. The confusion which follows when callers arrive can be easily understood. The girls themselves have placed in the room a piano for which they are taxing themselves to meet the monthly payments. This piano will, of course, become the property of the University to be used for women students.

Twenty-six of the freshmen examined at the beginning of the year by the Director of the Gymnasium were found to have valvular heart disease due, probably, to violent training in basketball during their high school career.

NEWS FROM DR. TILLET

Mrs. J. P. Caldwell lately carried in the "One Minute Interviews" section of The Charlotte Observer the following interesting news article concerning Dr. William S. Tillett, class of 1913, who is now pursuing his medical training as a diagnostician at Vienna:

Dr. Tillett writes interestingly in reference to his experience while studying in London, and about his trip to Vienna. He says that the money question is a very serious one, and he had in his pocket at last writing American, English, French, Swiss and Austrian money. Upon landing in Vienna he had $500 of America money, which converted into Austrian money amounted to 35,000,000 kronens. His mother was heard to express great satisfaction at having a multi-millionaire as a son.

Dr. Tillett writes that he is living at one of the best hotels in Vienna at a total cost, room and board of $1.00 per day. He says there is in Vienna the finest sort of opportunities for pursuing his medical training. Just before the war they built there the finest hospital in the world, and it is still kept up and is manned with the best corps of medical experts.

Vienna is kept as before the war, a clean and beautiful city, although the streets are practically devoid of traffic, and everyone has, as Dr. Tillett says, a listless air as though waiting for something to happen before taking any further interest in life.

In Vienna there are several medical students, who like Dr. Tillett had their training at Johns Hopkins hospital, and they constitute a small band of congenial friends.

Before leaving London where he had been for several months, he had some interesting experiences. During the Christmas holidays he and a friend of his, Dr. Bocoek, were invited to a typical English country estate where they spent several days. They were among the staid, non-joke-loving English. Had to dress two or three times a day, including particularly appearing in dinner dress in the evening. Went hunting on the estate clad in regulation hunting garb, and killed a few grouse.

Dr. Tillett while in London was also invited to dinner at the home of Lady Astor, the first lady member of the English parliament. He says Lady Astor is a regular politician and slapped him on the back and acted as a "good fellow" all round.

While in London Dr. Tillett went through a most typical London fog. There was no traffic on the streets for two days and people could scarcely walk on the pavement. It ordinarily took him five minutes to walk from the subway station to his apartment, but while the fog was on it took thirty minutes as he had to grope his way as in midnight darkness.

From Vienna Dr. Tillett will go to Paris where he will take further medical training, and is expected to return some time this summer. It is hoped that he will locate in Charlotte, though his plans in this respect are undecided.

Dr. Tillett was a regimental surgeon in the 33rd division with the rank of captain during the war, and went to France where he rendered first aid to soldiers in the trenches.

A. B. Owens (B. S. 1921), is with the Dupont Company, at Charlotte.

WASHINGTON ALUMNI HOLD BANQUET

Edgar Turlington, class of 1911, writes: "On January 27 while the snow storm which nearly buried the capital city was at its wildest, thirteen Carolina alumni held a banquet at the New Ebbitt Hotel and had their interest in the University quickened and deepened by the good fellowship of the occasion and by an informal address from Hon. A. W. McLean, director of the War Finance Corporation. Mr. McLean told of his recent visit to Chapel Hill and of his confidence that there still pervades on the campus the spirit which made the oldest of the state universities also the one most nearly approaching the ideal in maintenance of high scholarship and in service to the people. Those who were present felt well repaid for having braved the storm. We plan to have another meeting of the local association before summer."

THE CHIMES OF NORMANDY

On February 8, the department of Music offered the Chimes of Normandy, by Robert Planquette, as its annual presentation of comic opera. Beatrice Barton Risley and Dorothy Russell sang the leading women's parts, while the star male parts were taken by LeGrande Everett, Albert Hewitt, and Charles Siewers. All of these were sung and acted well, and the chorus and orchestra combined with them to give the most spirited performance that has yet been given under the auspices of the department. Hazel Gantt Weaver as dramatic director and Paul John Weaver in charge of the musical training, deserve great credit for the success of the evening. The improved acoustics of Memorial Hall were much commented on by the audience, which was able to understand the words much more fully than in previous years.

THREE STUDENTS MEET DEATH

The campus was shocked and saddened beyond expression on February 17 at the news that early in the morning hours an automobile with six passengers had been struck by a switch engine at the East Durham crossing, death resulting to Geo. T. Peoples, of Townsville, Geo. M. Hadley, of Mt. Airy, and Charles Leeman, of Monroe, all three Carolina students, and to F. T. Bryan, of Daleville, Ala., auto driver. The young men were returning from Raleigh where they had attended a ball at State College.

Jule C. Spaeh, of Winston-Salem, and Paisley Boney, of Goldsboro, the other occupants of the car, were injured, though not seriously. From the best evidence obtainable it appears that the car was going at a slow rate of speed at the time it was struck by the switch engine.

CAROLINA WINS CROSS COUNTRY RUN

On Saturday, December 10, in connection with the high school championship football game, Carolina won the cross-country run participated in by Carolina, Trinity and Elon. Carolina won second, third and fourth places, giving her eight points. Morlette, of Elon, won first place, and was followed in succession by Purser, D. Ranson and P. Ranson, (brothers of the original "Ratty") of Carolina.

TO CAROLINA

Carolina, dearest mother,
 Wise with age, and strong with youth,
 Teach your children, more than other
 Goods of life, to value Truth.

Many years have marked the burning
 Of your light upon the bill.
 People of the State are turning Towards that light for guidance still.

These are times of great confusion;
 All our life seems insecure,
 What is real, and what illusion?
 What is false, and what is sure?

Fearful doubts beset the nation,
 Truth alone can make us free.
 Mother, teach this generation
 Out of Law comes Liberty.

JUDGE McLEAN OF FIFTY-SEVEN

Judge William Pinkney McLean, of the class of 1857, is still at the age of 85 years quite active in the performance of his professional and civic duties at Fort Worth, Texas. Since his graduation from the University in the long past days of '57, Judge McLean has put forth his efforts in climes that are far distant from Tar Heelia, but that his Alma Mater may well take pride in his career is shown by the following close-up of this distinguished alumnus, which is taken from the Forth Worth Record of August 5, 1921:

William Pinkney McLean, lawyer, soldier and statesman, one of the few surviving members of the Texas constitutional convention of 1875, will celebrate the 85th anniversary of his birth at his desk in the law offices of McLean, Scott & McLean in the Ellison building next Tuesday.

Judge McLean declared Thursday that the occasion is not of sufficient importance to warrant a celebration any more strenuous than his every day work, and according to his friends and colleagues, it is doubtful if many men in their prime are more active in their work than is this ex-soldier, pioneer lawmaker and citizen of Fort Worth and Texas.

He is the father of W. P. McLean Jr., who, with Walter Scott, compose the law firm bearing their names.

Copiah County, Mississippi, is the birth place of William Pinkney McLean. His parents were Allen Ferguson McLean and Ann Rose McLean. He came to Texas at an early age and attended public schools in Cass and Harrison counties until 1849; then the schools at Marshall gave him further insight into the rudiments of an education until 1854. He entered the University of North Carolina in 1854, and he graduated in 1857. He studied law until the latter part of 1858.

The same year he took up the practice of law at Jefferson, Texas. Born of sturdy parents, the calling of a planter appealed strongly to the young McLean and in 1859 he removed to Victoria, where he purchased a plantation and settled down to a life of bucolic endeavor.

From that county he was elected to the ninth legislature of Texas in 1861.

Then came the war between the states. He enlisted in the Nineteenth Texas infantry and served throughout the duration of the war. Promotion came rapidly to the young soldier and he rose from the ranks to a major. Coming from the army he resumed the practice of law. He was again sent to the state legislature, this time by the voters of Red River and Titus counties, and attended the twelfth session in 1869.

He was nominated as presidential elector by his party in 1872, but resigned before the election to make the race for election to congress and was elected.

Sent to Convention

In 1875 he was elected a member of the Texas constitutional convention in the same year and served. To that convention was committed the execution of a task scarcely less great than the one that confronted the makers of the constitution of 1845.

There were complaints of unjust taxes; freer citizenship had to be assembled; the school system had to be adjusted to new and enlarged conditions; the status of the enfranchised negroes had to be made clear and the courts purged, as it were, from the taint of military rule imposed upon the state by former leaders.

In accomplishing the things enumerated the hand of McLean was conspicuous. His was the mind, fitted by legal training and congressional experience, which had a most important part in the shaping of the constitution of 1876.

He served one term as judge of the fifth judicial district, having been elected to that office in 1884, and in 1891 he was appointed railroad commissioner by Governor Hogg.

After serving in that capacity for three years he resigned to resume the practice of law, and has been in active practice in Fort Worth ever since.

The maiden name of Judge McLean's life partner was Margaret Batte. Nine children were born to them. Of these four survive—William P. Jr., Margaret, John H. and Bessie.

UNIVERSITY CREDIT FOR TAR HEEL WORK

For several years the question of allowing the journalistic work of the editors and reporters of the Tar Heel to count as a credit toward a degree has been under discussion. In January a plan was submitted by Louis Graves, professor of journalism, and approved by the advisory committee of the faculty, whereby a member of the Tar Heel staff may win a credit of one course or one-half course, depending upon the extent of his activities in the service of the paper.

Supervision is exercised by the professor of journalism. With the assistance of the editor-in-chief, he keeps track of the editing and writing done by the staff members, and he gives advice when it is considered necessary. The men who apply for this credit constitute a class which meets on call.

As a result of a ruling, now in force, it is no longer possible for students, who have failed in one school of the University during the fall term to transfer to another school after the holidays.

THE ECONOMICS OF PETROLEUM. By Joseph E. Pogue [A.B. '06, M.S. '07 (U. N. C.); Ph.D. '09 (Yale)], Consulting Engineer, New York; John Wiley & Sons, Inc. 1921. Pp. 385. $6.00.

The world-wide interest in petroleum was given such an impetus by the world war that the market has been literally flooded with books on petroleum and its products, on oil-geology and oil-fields, most of them mere compilations made by men who know little of oil at first hand, some of them good, some bad, and some indifferent. Many of them represent the kind of book fit for a place on the shelf by "Every Man His Own Lawyer" and might well be entitled "Every Man His Own Geologist," for such the purchaser soon becomes.

All of this makes the publication of Dr. Pogue's book most timely. It has been written by a man who has had years of experience with the U. S. Geological Survey and the Smithsonian Institution; also, as Assistant Director of the Bureau of Oil Conservation, and Industrial Engineer and Economist of one of the largest oil corporations in the world.

It is thorough and interesting throughout, and offers a wide range of information of vast importance to the oil industry. For instance, the Trend of Oil-field Development and Oil Production, Economic Organization, Petroleum Prices, Petroleum By-Products, Motor Fuel Problem, and Mexico as a Source of Petroleum, are a few of the subjects discussed.

The book will appeal to petroleum engineers, geologists, and oil producers; and it will also prove invaluable to oil executives, sales managers and salesmen, oil jobbers, manufacturers of automobiles, automotive engineers, shale engineers, statisticians, economists, industrial engineers, bankers and financiers, investors in oil shares,—in fact, to everyone interested in any way with oil. The members of these many groups will find the book packed with helpful everyday facts of interest.

As the author states: "The petroleum industry is one of the major industrial activities of the country. It represents the fuel support of automotive transportation, supplies the lubricants essential to the operation of all industrial activities, and hence underwrites the progress of modern civilization."

A special feature of this book is the large number of engraved charts, which give at a glance accurate figures and facts dealing with production, consumption, prices, costs, etc. The data for these charts summarize all the available statistical information on oil, and are arranged for immediate reference. These, and the book as a whole, offer to all concerned a remarkable study of the oil situation, touching every phase of the industry that comes up for daily discussion.

The American University Union, with which the University of North Carolina is connected as a subscribing institution, cordially invites students and graduates of the University, visiting Europe, to make use of the facilities of the Union offices at 50 Russell Square, London, W. C., and 1 rue de Fleurus, Paris. Lists of lodgings and pensions are kept and various social opportunities are offered. Access may also be obtained to universities and other institutions of learning, and candidates for degrees will find their way made easier by consulting, at Paris, Professor Paul Van Dyke, Director of the Continental Division, and at London, Dr. George E. MacLean, Director of the British Division.

The annual bulletin of the Union has just been issued and may be obtained on application to the secretary, Professor J. W. Cunliffe, Journalism Building, Columbia University, New York City. The reports show that there were 1153 registrations during the year at the London office, and over 500 at the Paris headquarters.

Two papers by Dr. A. S. Wheeler of the Department of Chemistry appeared in the December issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society. The first is the fourth paper in a series on "Hydroxynaphthoquinone Studies" and is entitled "New Derivatives of 2, 3, 8-Tribromo-5-hydroxy-1, 4-naphthoquinone" and presents the results of work done by T. M. Andrews for his Ph.D. thesis. The second paper is the third in a series on "Para-cymene Studies" and is entitled "The Bromination of 2-Amino-para-cymene," and presents the results of work done by Ira W. Smithey for the Ph.D. thesis.

The January issue of Studies in Philology is devoted largely to articles concerned with the Greek and Latin Classics: "Biographical Criticism of Vergil since the Renaissance," by Duane Reed Stuart of Princeton University; "The Revelation of Aeneas's Mission," by George Howe of the University of North Carolina; "The Structure of Heliodorus' 'Aethiopica,'" by Clinton Walker Keyes of Columbia University; "Precedent in Roman Law," by G. A. Harrer of the University of North Carolina; "'Fortuna' in Latin Poetry," by H. V. Canter of the University of Illinois; "The Influence of Bernard Mandeville," by F. B. Kaye of Northwestern University.

Dr. B. E. Washburn, Senior State Director of the Rockefeller Foundation International Health Board, presents in the Jamaica Gazette for January 12 a report of the Jamaica hookworm campaign of 1921.

GIFTS RECEIVED BY THE LIBRARY

The Library of the University of North Carolina has recently received a part of the medical library of the late John Edwin Ray, Jr., Captain Medical Corps, 119th Infantry, 30th Division. The collection contains fifty-two volumes of books, among which three very important sets are to be noted: Cheyne and Burghard, Surgical Treatment (5 vol.); A. B. Johnson, Operative Therapeutics (5 vols.); and William Osler, Modern Medicine (7 vols.).

The collection was given to the Medical Library by his mother, Mrs. J. E. Ray, of Raleigh. Captain Ray was wounded at the Battle of Bellecourt, September 30, 1918, and died on October 5, 1918. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and Military Cross (British), for distinguished service.

Other gifts received by the Library include the following:

The Italians residing in America, through Luigi Carnovale, a reproduction of the Codice Trivulziano ("Divina Commedia"), by Dante.

W. R. Kenan, Jr., '91, seven bound volumes of chemical journals for 1920.

The Beethoven Association (New York City), Thayer's Life of Ludwig von Beethoven, three volumes.

The Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum (Honolulu), Memoirs and Occasional Papers, fourteen volumes.

Bart M. Gatling, '92, English Law Reports and Treatises, from the law library of his grandfather, the late Bartholomew F. Moore, of Raleigh, seventy-three volumes.

Professor William Cain, Transactions of the American Society of Civil Engineers, thirty volumes.

NEWS NOTES OF 1919

Leroy B. Willis is secretary and treasurer of the Chas. Hall Lumber Company, New Bern. He recently sold his interest in the fish business which he has been conducting since the death of his father in the spring of 1920.

Graham A. Barden, "Happy," is judge of recorder's court, New Bern, where he has been engaged in the practice of law since leaving school.

Harry F. Henson, Jr., is the junior member of the law firm of Henson and Henson, Roanoke, Va., with offices in the First National Bank Building. He is in search of Harvey Campbell, and writes: "I went to New York and looked all over the Guaranty Trust Co., but could find no one who could tell me anything about him. There are so many big men in that place that one more or less doesn't seem to make much of an impression."

At the annual banquet of the Davidson County Alumni Association held during the holidays three members of '19 were present: John Totten, who is teaching at Yadkin College, Davidson County, a school conducted by his father; Roswald Robbins, better known as "Big Boy" Robbins, who is coaching athletics and teaching at Augusta Military Academy, Fort Defiance, Va.; and H. G. West, editor of the Chattown News, Thomasville.

John Aycock is pursuing graduate work at Columbia University, and helping John Terry see the city.

HIGH SCHOOL DEBATES

Two hundred and fifty high schools will participate in the triangular debates of the High School Debating Union on March 24. Ninety-two counties are represented in the State-wide contest. The schools winning both triangular debates will send their teams to Chapel Hill on April 6 and 7 to compete in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial Cup.

With this year's contest the High School Debating Union rounds out the first decade of its existence. The contest was taken up in 1912-13 by the Di and Phi Literary Societies upon the suggestion of C. E. McIntosh, of the class of 1911. It is now conducted under the joint auspices of the University Extension Division and the two societies. N. W. Walker has been chairman of the central committee since the contest was inaugurated, and E. R. Rankin has been secretary.

Higher institutions of other states have followed Carolina's lead in inaugurating stimulating contests among high schools. Notably this has been the case in Virginia, South Carolina, Kentucky, Alabama and Mississippi.

The query to be discussed this year is: Resolved, That the United States Should Enter the League of Nations.

TENNIS TAKES ON NEW LIFE

Tennis has taken a new lease on life at the University.

The playing surfaces have been improved, new nets have been obtained, and umpires' chairs are stationed at the varsity courts.

The setting aside of these varsity courts, for the practice of selected candidates for the University's team, has proven to be a great stimulus to interest in the game. When the weather is suitable matches between the foremost players are scheduled and advertised, and there are many spectators.

Carolina beat Virginia by four matches to one in the tennis meet that was held in connection with the football game last Thanksgiving Day. It also won from Trinity and the Greensboro Country Club, losing only one match to each. Now negotiations are under way looking to a trip northward this spring, to meet the Naval Academy, Georgetown, the University of Maryland and two or three other institutions.

A letter has been received from the University of Michigan tennis management proposing to play Carolina at Chapel Hill in April, when the Michigan team is to make a Southern trip. Efforts are being made to arrange this match.

CAROLINA ENTERS BASKETBALL SERIES

AS THE REVIEW goes to press the Carolina basketball team is in Atlanta, Ga., where it is participating in the Southern championship series.

The team has shown superiority over the college teams of North Carolina, having defeated Wake Forest twice, State College twice, Trinity and Elon.

On a brief northern trip, Carolina won from V. M. I. and lost to Washington and Lee and Virginia.
